

Tiffani

Mr. Ferrell

Language Arts

1/8/2009

You're Taking Away My Cell Phone

I know what you're thinking, "I am too young for a cell phone we should take it away." But here are some good reasons for me to keep my cell phone.

A cell phone is a tool to communicate so I can talk to my friends by not taking the house phone. Since I ride the bus home and you aren't home when I get there and what if I get locked out and the power went out. I can't open the garage? If I had my phone, I would be able to call my mom and tell her that I am outside and the power has gone out. Since I don't have my phone, I can't.

Emergencies can appear out of no where. Like say a fire, what if I was home alone and I see a fire next door? I could be nice enough to call the fire department. That would be heroic don't you think? Also, imagine you are at a party at the beach and the lifeguard is on lunch break and a friend gets stung by a jellyfish. If I had my cell phone I could call the ambulance. Also, what if some one brakes into our house and I'm hiding and can't call any one because I don't have a phone with me? Oh, gee if only I had my phone.

GPS is helpful when the GPS goes dead in the car on the way to Branson. I could find my way home when I'm lost. When you have a GPS I can find my way to find public places that are new and that I don't know where they are.

Tiffani1

Now I hope I changed your mind by telling you all the possibilities of what a cell phone is good for but if you refuse it's alright I understand. Please let me keep my cell phone.